PRESS RELEASE

CUTS hails the revival of Doha trade talks

New Delhi, India, January 27, 2007

"Global welfare worth billions of dollars is at stake and trade ministers from around the world have taken a right decision to revive the Doha round of trade talks at the political level," said Pradeep S. Mehta, Secretary General of CUTS International while welcoming the decision. Trade ministers from about 30 countries from Asia, Europe and Americas met on the sidelines of the World Economic Forum held at Davos in Switzerland and decided to revive the stalled negotiations. <http://www.cuts-citee.org/press-archive-dec06.htm#PRESS01>

Concluding the Doha Round: The Reality Check

The negotiations were suspended in late July 2006 due to irreconcilable differences among G-6 countries over farm subsidies and tariff cuts. In spite of the not so encouraging outcome of members' informal consultations and some high profile meetings involving heads of states, Pascal Lamy, however is making one last-ditch effort to restart the Doha negotiations. Lamy is aware of the fact that whatever little chance of finishing the round by 2007 depends upon achievement of significant progress in negotiations by the early spring. If this is not done now, then the Round could go into hibernation. <http://www.cuts-citee.org/pdf/BP07-WTO-1.pdf>

ABC of Dispute Settlement

This monograph focuses on the dispute settlement mechanism, which came into force with the establishment of the WTO in 1995. An introduction and basics on the development of WTO's procedure for adjudicating trade disputes between member countries is presented by this monograph. This will help to introduce the WTO dispute settlement systems, which have become the most frequently used mechanisms for the settlement of disputes among governments. <http://www.cuts-citee.org/pdf/MONOGRAPH07-01.pdf>

India Inc advises caution against US, EU farm offer

Financial Express, India, January 30, 2007

India Inc and civil society groups welcomed the new impetus given to the WTO negotiations at Davos, but said India should be cautious about the reported 'offers' made by the EU and the US on agriculture. <http://www.cuts-citee.org/media-archive-jan07.htm#MEDIA05>

Troubled talks threaten WTO's credibility

Financial Times, London, January 24, 2007

Consensus takes time. The last successful round of trade talks took seven years; Doha has been going for more than five and, though showing signs of life, is still in deep trouble. But few trade observers and officials doubt that WTO credibility is worth preserving. <http://www.cuts-citee.org/media-archive-jan07.htm#MEDIA04>

Can India become an EU member?

Business Line, India, February 24, 2007

The European Union is a unique success story and thus many countries are queuing up to join it. Starting from six countries in 1951, it now has 27 members with many more set to join. One question raised to the EU's Enlargement Commissioner, Olli Rehn in the columns of Financial Times recently shows how adventurous people can be. <http://www.cuts-citee.org/media-archive-feb07.htm#MEDIA01>

Freedom from past

Jang, Pakistan, January 14, 2007

Pakistan and India need to go beyond formal exchanges to resolve their differences. The world abounds in examples that the two countries can follow to foster peace and prosperity in South Asia. Only a few weeks ago, Pakistan and India exchanged the lists of their nuclear installations. The purpose of the exercise is that these installations will not be attacked by the two countries in the event of any conflict. <http://www.cuts-citee.org/media-archive-jan07.htm#MEDIA03>

Developed world's agriculture sop offer key to Doha revival

Financial Express, India, January 14, 2007

With the deadlock in WTO talks continuing, any positive indication by major trading partners is seen as a flicker of hope for breaking the impasse. The meeting between EU trade commissioner Peter Mandelson and US trade representative Susan Schwab in Washington last week did generate some hope. <http://www.cuts-citee.org/media-archive-jan07.htm#MEDIA02>

For more than mutual assurance

Indo-Pak lessons from the Argentine-Brazilian model of cooperation
Financial Express, India, January 12, 2007

Pakistan and India have just exchanged lists of their nuclear installations, as part of a mutual assurance that these shall not be attacked by either party in the event of any conflict. However, exchanging lists is not sufficient cover for an unwarranted action by either country. <http://www.cuts-citee.org/media-archive-jan07.htm#MEDIA01>
