The project aims to establish linkages between CSOs and research institutions while conducting advocacy with the governments. It is being implemented in Bangladesh, India, Nepal, Pakistan, and Sri Lanka through partnerships and focuses on the five key elements of the July Framework Agreement - agriculture, non-agricultural market access, development dimensions, services and trade facilitation.

Negotiating positions of the South Asian countries are analysed and then juxtaposed with the concerns and perceptions of diverse stakeholders. On each issue, the position of a particular country and civil society perceptions has been placed with those of other countries, so that these countries can arrive at better negotiating positions.

Country drafts were prepared and National Consultations were organised in project partnering countries, involving trade negotiators, civil society representatives, academics, media and business representatives to discuss the respective draft research papers and to provide dialogue and discussion forum on issues relating to the Doha round:

- Pakistan: September 12, 2005
- Bangladesh: September 15, 2005
- India: September 17, 2005
- Nepal: September 19, 2005
- Sri Lanka: September 22, 2005

National Consultations are being organised in all three project partnering countries in October, with a view to engage businesses in regional trade initiatives and promote policy responses that factor stakeholder preferences.

Linkages between Trade, Development & Poverty Reduction

This project attempts to facilitate cross-fertilisation of experiences and lessons learnt on linkages between trade, development and poverty reduction in developing countries to develop appropriate policy responses. The project, over a period of four years, will be implemented in 14 countries in Asia, Africa and Europe and would manifest the policy relevance of international trade on poverty reduction, thereby helping in articulating policy coherence. In each country, there are project research and advocacy partners working on diverse functions.

Between July and September, country background papers being prepared by each project partner for their respective country were completed. The preparation of a study on stakeholder feedback on TDP initiatives in Eastern and Southern Africa was undertaken, while a similar study on Asia is underway. The national dialogues were held in project partnering countries as under:

- UK: July 19, 2005
- Kenya: July 18, 2005
- Cambodia: August 23, 2005
- Zambia: August 30, 2005
- Uganda: September 01, 2005
- South Africa: September 23, 2005
- Tanzania: September 22, 2005

These seminars are key to conduct advocacy at the country level and involve CSOs, government bodies, research institutions, media persons, and other stakeholders. It provides a platform to enable identification of gaps, learn from each other and discuss ways to improve linkages between trade and development, as well as applying the lessons in their respective fields of activities.

The India National Seminar for the project will be held at Jaipur, Rajasthan, on November 15, 2005. An International Symposium will be held at Geneva, Switzerland, on November 24, 2005. The symposium is intended to involve donors, providers and recipients of trade development poverty reduction initiatives (TDPs), NGOs, government bodies, research institutions, media persons, and other relevant stakeholders engaged in the processes of trade, development and poverty initiatives. The two studies on stakeholder perceptions on trade, development and poverty initiatives in Africa and Asia would be discussed.

The event will deliberate on linkages between trade policy and development policy in India, and what stakeholders think about these linkages and related issues.

Improving Institutions for Pro-Poor Growth

This project is being implemented by London School of Economics. CUTS-CITEE is the South Asia partner.

It aims to analyse the impacts of the interactions of formal and informal political, social and cultural institutions with economic institutions on growth - particularly Pro-Poor Growth (PPG) - and to develop middle-range theory about them through structured comparative country case studies, primarily drawn from SSA but with some from South Asia and Latin America.

It also proposes complementary study of the institutional conditions for the establishment of employment intensive enterprise. Our research will be cross-disciplinary, using both quantitative and qualitative methods.

It involves academic and research community; interest groups in civil society and sphere of policy and practice to be engaged at international, national and sub-national levels.

The IPPG Programme’s inaugural workshop shall be held in Nairobi from 26 to 30 September 2005 in Nairobi. The workshop will be attended by the IPPG partners and researchers from various areas across the world.

South-South Economic Cooperation: Devising a Comprehensive IBSA Strategy for WTO

The project aims at conducting action research on IBSA countries’ (India, Brazil and South Africa) positions on WTO negotiations on agriculture.

It will prepare an overview of agriculture in project-countries (how many farmers, how much land etc.) and some trends, including export/import statistics. This will set the scene for issues relating to trade negotiations and will identify project-countries’ positions on issues such as market access, domestic support and export competition.

A country’s position on these issues will be discussed with relevant officials of the trade ministry and the project will find out the views/concerns of different stakeholders in a project-country with respect to that country’s position.

It involves farmer organisations, agricultural business houses, consumer groups and other CSOs (especially women groups), bodies representing agriculture labourers, government officials from other than the trade ministry, WTO experts, and other appropriate stakeholders.

Regional Economic Cooperation in South Asia

Exploring avenues for enhancing the regional economic cooperation in South Asia, the project endeavours to assess the present status of this regional bloc and analyse its future prospects. An effort is being made to organise a series of meetings in South Asian countries that bring together like-minded people and gather their opinions on South-Asian Economic Trade. It aims at establishing a platform for facilitating cross-fertilisation of experiences and lessons learnt in order to develop appropriate policy responses and look for new initiatives that could be launched to enhance economic cooperation among the South Asian countries.

The Karachi National Consultation held on 23-25 September 2005 facilitated the synergy between business, policy makers, CSOs and other stakeholders to learn from each other and strengthen their collective perspectives and positions.

The Dhaka National Consultation will be held on November 21-23, 2005 and would follow similar lines as the Karachi consultation.

BRIEFING PAPERS

A series of briefing papers were published under the Exploring India - Mekong Economic Relationship project.

India, SAARC, ASEAN, BIMSTEC - Commonalities, Differences and Future Cooperation

Various overlapping Free Trade Agreements (FTA’s) have been signed between India and her neighbours. This paper discusses the commonalities, differences on the areas of economic cooperation and investment and possible future cooperation among South Asia Free Trade Agreement (SAFTA), Association of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN) Free Trade Agreement (AFTA), Bangladesh, India, Myanmar, Sri Lanka, Thailand-Economic Cooperation (BIM STEC) and India.

India-GMS Trade and Investment Corridor: Possible Role & Responsibility of Thailand

The main reason for countries engaging in Regional Trade Agreements (RTAs) is the prospect of economic gains resulting from freer trade. However, regional integration also has indirect effects in the form of fostering greater cooperation between countries/regions through their separate RTAs with a third party. This paper discusses the role Thailand can play by acting as a gateway between India and the Greater Mekong Sub-region (GMS).

Agriculture and Agro-industry in Cambodia

Cambodia’s economy has opened up and steps have been taken towards a market economy since the 1980s. This has resulted in the expanding of economy but it still remains one of the poorest countries in the world. With about three quarters of the workforce engaged in the agricultural sector, the upgrading of the agriculture and agro-industry is a key component of the country’s overall development strategy. This paper explores and examines the recent developments and the current state of Cambodia’s agriculture sector and its agribusiness as well as analysing and evaluating constraints, opportunities and threats.

Enterprise Development in the Mekong Sub-region: Its Transformation and Impact

Enterprises in the Mekong Sub-region have experienced significant changes since the mid 1980’s, including a shift in ownership structures from primarily state-owned enterprises (SOEs) towards more privately owned firms and restructuring of SOEs. The paper discusses this scenario for each of the three countries, Lao PDR, Cambodia & Vietnam and recounts the benefits resulted therein and suggests ways of enhancing them further.

Trade in Textiles and Clothing: Exploring Cooperation between SAARC and ASEAN

The elimination of global textile and apparel trade quotas on January 1, 2005 has brought about a dramatic shift in the world market for textiles and apparel products. This policy brief addresses the trade in textiles & clothing (T&C) by focusing the cooperation between ASEAN and South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation (SAARC). It explores the competitiveness and prospects for cooperation in ASEAN and SAARC, including business climate, infrastructure, labour costs, availability of raw material and proximity to markets, etc.

Humayun for Greater Regional Economic Cooperation

The News, September 25, 2005

Regional Economic Cooperation in South Asia is almost a non-starter when compared with other regional trade agreements (RTAs). The Federal Commerce Minister of Pakistan, Humayun Akhtar Khan called upon the business community, media and civil society to influence and pressurise the politicians in a CUTS seminar to take courageous steps for achieving greater regional economic cooperation in South Asia.
